Health Law

Health Law: The health care industry is continually being shaped by advancements in technology. By staying up-to-date on the latest advancements in healthcare IT, we are able to address client concerns now and in the future.

Our law firm represents health care industry clients, including health care vendors and carriers, in a variety of areas:

- Medical record issues
- Technology transactions
- Information privacy issues
- Data protection
- Health care technology contract issues
- Corporate governance and regulatory issues
- Health product and service representation

We are familiar with the various laws that apply to health product and service providers and those operating in the healthcare IT world, including HIPAA and other privacy laws. We also stay up-to-date on the latest changes in health care reform laws.

Health care companies turn to Murphy Cooke Kobrick LLP, to address a variety of information technology and intellectual property law issues that affect the health care industry. We combine our knowledge of technology, health law, business law, and intellectual property to provide comprehensive legal representation to companies in the health care industry.

We are an established law firm offering intellectual property representation to health care service and technology companies operating in Silicon Valley, Los Angeles and throughout the nation.
